Bob Bullis Joins t. howard & associates architects; Will Lead Strategic Development and Planning

Dallas, Texas, January 18, 2010 – t. howard & associates architects (THA) announced today that Bob Bullis, AIA LEED AP, has joined the firm as a director. Drawing on more than 25 years of experience in design, project management, and construction documentation, Bullis will help lead tha's strategic initiatives, business planning and firm operations.

"Bob is a recognized industry leader with proven success in both the technical and business development sides of the business," said Todd Howard, president of THA. "We look forward to the unique perspective he'll bring to our efforts to create functional spaces that support the well being of people."

"THA's commitment to responsive architecture that balances the needs of client, community, user and environment has enabled it to maintain momentum in a difficult environment," said Bullis. "I am excited about joining such a creative, award-winning firm and helping focus its efforts around initiatives that will enable it to reach new heights of success, especially in its Early Childhood Studio, senior housing and healthcare/institutional work."

Prior to joining THA, Bullis was director of business development for JHP Architects, another Dallas-based, award-winning architecture firm. In addition, he served as managing director of the firm's highly successful Senior Housing Studio. Over his 25 years, Bullis has provided architectural services for a wide variety of corporate, institutional, and private sector clients, and has received the recognition of his peers with several industry awards. Bullis is an active participant in the local AIA chapter, currently serving as vice president and secretary. He received both his bachelor and master degree in Architecture from the University of Texas at Arlington.
